BEATLEMANIA, SOVIET-STYLE

How The Beatles Rocked The Kremlin

Mon 9th, 9 p.m. on THIRTEEN and THIRTEEN HD
Sat 14th, 10 p.m. on WLIW21

BRITISH FILMMAKER Leslie Woodhead remembers the first time he heard The Beatles perform live in a Liverpool cellar in 1962.

"The music roared up to meet me as we felt our way down the stairs," he recalls. "A few days later, we shot the first-ever film with The Beatles, a sweaty lunchtime session in The Cavern."

That grainy two-minute film served as the genesis for How The Beatles Rocked The Kremlin, Woodhead's exploration of Beatlemania in the former Soviet Union. Even though The Beatles never performed there, their music and rebellious style influenced Russian youth. On the 20th anniversary of the fall of the Berlin Wall, this film explores how the Fab Four gave young people hope and contributed to the decline of the Soviet system.

Visit thirteen.org/beatles for video extras, a filmmaker Q&A, and a special online contest inviting viewers to nominate an artist or band that has influenced world history. If you nominate the winning musician, you'll win a free CD by that artist.

Also, don't miss The Beatles' historic 1964 American television debut in Ed Sullivan—The Sixties (Sun 29th, 9 p.m.).
